Saving the devils

OXLEY State School held a free dress day on May 29 to help raise funds to combat cancers in Tasmanian devils.

The day was organised by Year 4 pupil Ceilidh Prowse-Bishop who, has so far raised about $1250 through a website campaigning to help her favourite animal.

School principal Bruce Robertson said the day was aimed to educate and to assist the Save the Tasmanian Devil project through awareness and gold coin donations.

“Ceilidh has prepared lessons suitable for each year level and ordered masks for everyone with facts about the Tassie devil,” he said.

Ceilidh was prompted to help the Tasmanian devil after learning about Tasmanian devil cancer on a trip to the Currumbin Wildlife Sanctuary early this year.

People can make donations through her website www.tassiedevilcancer.com and buy Tasmanian devil merchandise through her Cafe Press store www.cafepress.com/tazdevildiner.

Time to turn over a new leaf?

With Griffith University's new one-year Graduate Diploma in Adult & Vocational Education, you could soon be sharing your industry skills and experience with adults or secondary students as a VET (Vocational Education Training) teacher.
